Director, Integrated Community Based Learning Network, School of Medicine

Reference: 111147

Duration: Permanent Full Time

Location: 4700 Keele Street, Toronto

York is a leading international teaching and research university, and a driving force for positive change. Empowered by a welcoming and diverse community with a uniquely global perspective, we are preparing our students for their long-term careers and personal success. Together, we can make things right for our communities, our planet and our future.

The Director, Integrated Community Based Learning Network (ICLN) is the first role of its kind for a new medical school focused on transformative community-based medical education. This leadership role will bring together a network of forward-thinking healthcare delivery partners to develop a decentralized community-based medical education model. The role will be responsible capacity building, ensuring the York University School of Medicine (SoM) have the requisite skills and resources to implement the strategic goals of the ICLN. The role will build and maintain critical relationships including partner hospitals, health care organizations, and members of the provider community to meet the objectives of the School. The role will provide results-oriented leadership by developing and regularly evaluating key operational and financial targets for the ICLN project. Reporting to the Chief Operating Officer (COO) with ultimate oversight from the Dean of Record of the School of Medicine, the role will be committed to planning and operationalizing a collaborative governance framework with a shared commitment to the mission, vision and importance of the SoM and to advance medical education and health care transformation in collaboration with the Faculty Lead, ICLN. The role demonstrates commitment to promoting decolonization, diversity, equity, and inclusion in medical education and fostering a culture of excellence, professionalism, and lifelong learning.
